We produced four episodes of the video podcast Bar-Tikun and published them on three platforms: Spotify, YouTube, and Facebook. Additionally, we produced three more episodes that are currently in the editing process and are expected to go on air within a week or two. In the new episodes recorded and filmed last week, we included not only speakers but also a musician who performs a piyyut in each episode. The first four episodes featured interviewer Mrs. Aline Milul, a radio host, who interviewed Professor Meir Bouzaglo in three episodes. He spoke about the spiritual significance of Rosh Hashanah, the meaning of self-reflection, and the judicial reform. In one episode, she interviewed Professor Bouzaglo and me on the topic of traditional education.

The main achievements during the last year of activity (main achievements, number of events, number of participants, etc.):

Spreading the message of Tikun to those who do not participate in our conferences and activities—the message of Masortiut as a remedy for the conflicts between different communities and political camps in Israeli society.

The message of Attentive Judaism, a “Togetherness that Gives Space,” enabling a connection between religious and non-religious Jews—a message that is not just about reconciliation but about initiating a shared process of clarifying the unique destiny of the Jewish people. This allows us to move from a partnership of fate (October 7 and the war) to a partnership of destiny.

The evaluation (methodology, results, comparisons with the precedent year, conclusions for the future...):

The success of the podcast is measured by the number of listeners, the number of viewers on YouTube, and the number of people engaging with our message across various platforms.

Provisional guide lines for the advancement of the program in the next year:

Connections to other podcast channels, linking to the Masoret channel through Moti Shaklar (former head of the Second Authority for Television, a veteran television professional). Moti Shaklar promised to promote the podcast on his channel and to jointly produce a series of television episodes featuring philosophical and cultural discussions with music.
